Site Environmental Awareness Training Scheme (SEATS) is a one-day interactive course for site supervisors and managers aimed at providing course candidates with an introduction to awareness of environmental issues on construction sites.

SEATS training course candidates will learn industry best-practice, relevant legislation and environmental and sustainability knowledge, enabling them to identify opportunities to improve environmental factors, and control and minimise negative environmental issues.

The Site Environmental Awareness Training Scheme is designed to meet the knowledge criteria the sub-contract chain is required to prove to major contractors. The course covers the environmental aspects of the Health and Safety Executive's touch-screen test.
